

About the First Nation's Admission Access

The First Nation's Admission Access (FNAA) is designed to increase the participation of First Nation's people into Adelaide University by providing choices to Undergraduate programs.

The FNAA is an alternative pathway for students to gain entry into Adelaide University who do not meet the criteria through the South Australian Tertiary Admissions Centre (SATAC) application process, and who may not have an adequate Australian Tertiary Admissions Rank (ATAR) score.

Completion of the FNAA application form does not guarantee acceptance.

Eligibility

The First Nation's Admission Access is available to Australian Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander applicants only.

Adelaide University supports a fair and equitable admission process, and you must successfully meet all the necessary requirements to enter the First Nation's Admission Access with Adelaide University.
